EMBRACE CHANGE BY EMBRACING INNOVATION

Can innovation also be a leading change-management strategy?

Absolutely. Because the vast majority of change, and the one that usually poses the greatest threat, is imposed on the company from the outside - changing customer needs, new competitors, disruptive technology - not from within. Which is why smart companies embrace change by embracing innovation, and not just by tinkering with org. charts, or by blasting high-octane corporate communications.

This provocative and game-changing keynote was designed to bring an energetically fresh perspective on why embracing change by embracing innovation is the No. 1 success strategy and the best investment in insuring an organization's future growth and competitive standing when disruptive market forces are assaulting it from all directions.

This game-changing keynote is ideal for:

- Innovation, Marketing, New Product Development, and Sales teams
- HR, Talent Management, and Organization Development/Change Management professionals
- Current and future leaders and policy makers

Three key takeaways for Monday-morning action:

- Relevance and power of innovation as a strategy for confronting and conquering change
- Core strategies for implementing the "embracing change by embracing innovation mindset"
- Importance of embedding the change-innovation link in the operating DNA of the company

For deeper learning, the tactics and strategies for embracing change by embracing innovation can also be delivered through training and coaching programs, and through facilitated workshops.
